Leo—the only son of Leo Bernard and Katherine Theresa Dubler (nee Mannion)—graduated from Gloucester Catholic High School in 1956. After a brief stint in the seminary (luckily for his three children and nine grandchildren Leo did not fully heed the call of the vocation) he departed to continue his education. After attending Villanova for one year—Leo transferred to St. John's University in New York where his favorite uncle (Fr. Edward Mannion) was the Athletic Director. After graduating with a degree in mathematics—Leo worked at General Accident Insurance Company in the actuarial department. After a year or so investigating this career path—Leo had a career change and after graduating from Rutgers's University Law School, embarked upon a 40 year career as an attorney in Gloucester County. Leo enjoyed his career and did many pro bono hours for family members, friends and those in need without resources.

Leo loved spending weekends in Ocean City with his family—travel, deep sea fishing, chess, pinochle, bridge and crossword puzzles. He had a deep passion for reading with a bent towards historical non-fiction. Leo's interest in history was driven by having survived living at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941. He often reminisced about the fear that permeated the island in the days following the attack and the vulnerability of the people living there. He also was quick to point out the precision of the Japanese Zero pilots and how the vast majority of their targets were purely military assets with minimal civilian involvement.

His family takes great comfort in knowing that Leo was a deeply religious man that embraced his faith and welcomed the next chapter of his life and all of its glories.

He will be deeply missed by his loving family but also reassured that his spirit lives on in his children and grandchildren.
